Sixth foot found at low tide

Investigators hoping DNA analysis will offer clues as to source

By JEFF HODSON
Metro Vancouver

A mysterious sixth human foot has been found on B.C.'s South Coast, RCMP said yesterday.

The foot — the second to wash ashore in three days — was found around 10 a.m. yesterday by a woman walking at low tide on Tyee Spit near Campbell River on Vancouver Island.

The right foot was found in a black Adidas sneaker, roughly size 10.

"The object will ultimately be examined by a forensic pathologist in attempts to determine the source of the foot and if it is related to the other feet recently found," said Const. Annie Linteau yesterday.

"A DNA analysis will also be requested. Consultation will be made with other investigators involved in these files to determine whether or not there is any connection."

Linteau said the DNA analysis is being conducted by the B.C. Coroner's Service.

There is some speculation that the foot may be linked to a 2005 airplane crash that killed four people near Quadra Island, a 10-minute ferry ride from where the latest foot was found. The victims' bodies have never been recovered.

Since August, six human feet have been found on various beaches in Southwest B.C.

In the most recent — Monday — a left foot was discovered off Ladner's Westham Island in the Fraser River. In May, another was discovered in the Fraser River, this time on Kirkland Island, between Delta and Richmond.

The first three feet were all found on Gulf Islands between Vancouver Island and the Mainland. In February, a foot was discovered on Valdes Island. Two others were found on Gabriola and Jedediah islands in August.

All six disembodied feet were found in sneakers.

Criminal crackdown

Police calling for 30 Strikes and You're Out policy

By KRISTEN THOMPSON
Metro Vancouver

In no other city do chronic criminals serve sentences as lenient as those here, and stricter punishments are needed to protect the public from people who've made a career of crime, the Vancouver Police Department said yesterday.

That's why it's calling for a policy where "super chronic" offenders are automatically given significant prison sentences once they've been convicted of 30 offences.

"Several of these criminals have more than 100 convictions (but) the average length of jail sentences are going down, not up," said Chief Const. Jim Chu.

"One offender we're tracking, his record is so long it will not fit anymore on the national computer system."

The VPD monitors 379 chronic offenders — those who have been charged at least 12 times in 12 months.

A 30 Strikes and You're Out policy would incarcerate 205 of those offenders.

Insp. Rob Rothwell said there has to be some "meaningful sentencing to protect the public."

"The rotating door of bringing them in for a short period of time and returning them to the community does nothing but perpetuate the problem."

Albert Des Lauriers, who owns a supermarket on East Hastings Street, has been broken into five times in as many weeks.

"People don't care, and it's mainly because there's no punishment. They're bragging about what they get away with," he said.

Four arrested in home invasion

Possible kidnapping thwarted, police say

By JOYCE YIP
for Metro Vancouver

Vancouver police believe they thwarted a possible kidnapping when they arrested four masked men in South Vancouver on Tuesday night after a violent and targeted home invasion.

Two of the four men were immediately arrested and, with the help of a police dog and helicopter, the other two were found within minutes of a home on Cartier Street and Dogwood Avenue.

A Burnaby man, 27, and three others from Richmond, two aged 18 and 17, face possible charges of kidnapping, forcible confinement, robbery, pointing a firearm and possession of a restricted weapon. The suspects' names were not released.

Police said they were still working to determine a motive.

Migrant workers face 'Third World' conditions: Report

By KRISTEN THOMPSON
Metro Vancouver

Migrant and immigrant farm workers in the Lower Mainland habitually face sub-standard working conditions and safety standards, according to a report released yesterday.

The study, Cultivating Farmworker Rights, draws from interviews with 53 immigrant and migrant farm workers, and found that workers are exploited, intimidated and work in "Third World conditions."

Mark Thompson, co-author of the report, said contractors aren't obliged to grant statutory holidays or pay overtime, which means most labourers bank below minimum wage.

"We were shocked to see a lack of basic protections for safety and hygiene. They didn't have bathrooms, water ... or a place to eat."

Thompson said many workers were afraid to speak out against unsafe working conditions.

"These people, mostly ladies, lack language skills and are very dependent on the farm labour contractors," he said. "These are not conditions that make you proud to be a British Columbian."

Adriana Paz, an organizer and advocate with Justicia For Migrant Workers, said many workers said they are treated "like animals" and that "slavery hasn't ended yet."

Christina Hanson, co-author of the study, said the province needs to restore basic employment standards to farm workers, which were rolled back in 2002 and 2003.

"The government needs to bring inspections and proactive enforcement back to the farms," she said.

RCMP releases report on Tasers

Recommends only senior officers be given stun guns

By ANDREA WOO
for Metro Vancouver

Eight months after the high-profile death of Polish immigrant Robert Dziekanski, the head of the public watchdog over the RCMP has released a report with a dozen recommendations regarding Taser use.

Dziekanski died last October after RCMP Tasered him at least two times at Vancouver International Airport.

Paul Kennedy, the RCMP complaints commission chairman, said that Tasers should only be used in situations where an individual poses a risk of "death of grievous bodily harm" and that RCMP must always seek immediate medical treatment for the individual.

He also recommended that Taser use be restricted to only RCMP members with a corporal rank or higher in urban settings and constables with at least five years experience in rural settings.

"Our recommendations are designed to hold the RCMP publicly accountable for its use of a weapon that has caused considerable apprehension among Canadians and to control usage creep," said Kennedy in a statement.

Paul Kennedy, chair of the commission for public complaints against the RCMP, issued his final report yesterday into the use of Tasers by RCMP officers.

The RCMP issued a statement yesterday saying it would act on the recommendations as quickly as possible.

Murray Mollard, executive director of the B.C. Civil Liberties Association, said the report is a step in the right direction but Tasers should be subject to strong government regulation.

"Minister [Stockwell] Day's got to take charge of the RCMP and start making some rules," he said. "We've seen that the RCMP, when left to themselves, have made serious errors in judgment."

Mollard also suggested a moratorium on Tasers, or to limit their use to instances when firearms would be used.

Groups to document airline encounters

Project focuses on surveillance of travellers

By ANDREA WOO
for Metro Vancouver

On the one-year anniversary of the Canadian no-fly list coming into effect yesterday, a number of civil rights groups announced that they are launching a national research project on traveller surveillance.

The project — headed by the International Civil Liberties Monitoring Group in partnership with the BCCLA, CUPE, Polaris Institute, the Canadian Labour Congress and La Ligue Des Doits et Liberties — will document stories from travellers about their encounters with U.S. and Canadian airlines, transport and border officials.

no-fly list

» According to the BCCLA, Transport Canada reported about 100 cases of false positives during the first year of the Canadian no-fly list. The list is said to contain between 500 and 3,000 names.

Micheal Vonn, policy director for the B.C. Civil Liberties Association, said that such lists offer little to no security benefits and are instead a "militarization of travel."

"It's a very convenient excuse for a national system of surveillance checkpoints," she said. "Every airport is now a checkpoint where you have to be vetted through a government surveillance system in order to go where you have every constitutional right to go."

Accused naked truck thief makes court appearance

A man accused of stealing a transport truck while naked and leading police in a lengthy pursuit appeared in Port Coquitlam Court yesterday.

Randall Dennis Girard, 49, faces seven charges including assault with a weapon, break and enter and theft.

On May 26, a man showed up naked at a farm in Pitt Meadows and made off with a five-tonne truck. After a 20-minute police pursuit, road spikes immobilized the truck, and the man was arrested after he exited the truck and was struck by an unmarked police SUV. The chase was broadcast live by Global TV.

Last Thursday, the British Columbia Civil Liberties Association filed a complaint with the Commission for Public Complaints Against the RCMP for using an unmarked police vehicle, which is forbidden in police pursuits. As well, the BCCLA said the RCMP used potential lethal force to end the man's escape even though he was unarmed and posed no apparent threat.

Girard is scheduled to appear in court again on July 9.

Group challenges Tory climate plan

Asks Federal Court to order Tories to abide by Kyoto

An environmental group asked a Federal Court judge yesterday to order the Conservative government to replace its own climate-change plan with one designed to meet Canada's obligations under the Kyoto Protocol.

"All government action must comply with the law," Friends of the Earth wrote in its court submission. "The will of Parliament is paramount and no administrative or executive authority is entitled to contravene it."

Backed by opposition parties, a Liberal bill that was supposed to force the Conservatives to create a plan to meet Kyoto emission requirements became law in June 2007. But the Conservatives said its implementation could trigger an economic crisis, and they introduced a Kyoto blueprint in August that ignored the Kyoto mandates.

> « The will of Parliament is paramount. »
> Friends of the Earth's court submission

The decision will likely hinge on the question of whether the courts can order a change in policy. Only Parliament, government lawyers argued yesterday, should be permitted to decide how to proceed.

"Certain disputes are not appropriate for adjudication and are more appropriately dealt with through another branch of government," the lawyers wrote.

Under the 1997 Kyoto agreement, Canada must cut greenhouse gas emissions to an average of six per cent below 1990 levels between 2008 and 2012. The Conservatives, however, argue tens of thousands of people would lose jobs if the government tried to meet that target.

Man holds up bank while on test drive

By VICTORIA HANDYSIDES
Metro Edmonton

When Edmonton car salesman Roger Jean took a customer on a test drive Tuesday, he never anticipated it would be the ride of his life, or that he'd become part of a crime that could have been pulled from a movie script.

At around 10:30 a.m., Jean hopped in a used 2005 Dodge Ram with a man who was interested in buying it from Edmonton's Crosstown Motors.

"He was supposedly taking the truck to the Northwest Territories," said Jean, who was suspicious right away. "We decided to go on a little drive."

> « There are a lot of cuckoos out there. »
> Salesman Roger Jean

"Some people will go for a test drive, and just walk away, because they just want a lift somewhere — unreal, but people do it all the time," Jean said, adding that the man stopped at a TD Bank at 112 Street and Groat Road.

When he got back, Jean said the man was holding his side and breathing heavily.

"I said to myself, 'Oh my God, this guy just robbed the bank.'"

Jean played it cool, and acted as if he knew nothing about the robbery.

"I didn't know who I was dealing with. There are a lot of cuckoos out there, especially in Edmonton."

The man raced east down Yellowhead Trail to Sherwood Park, where he stopped at a gas station. Acting quickly, Jean snatched the keys from the ignition, fled, and called police.

Vitrification as safe as in-vitro: Study

Women who want to put motherhood on hold may soon be able to deep-freeze their eggs and store them indefinitely without worry.

Vitrification, a patented technology refined at McGill University, rapidly freezes eggs to prevent damaging ice crystals from forming.

The study, published in the journal Reproductive BioMedicine Online, is the largest to date to look at outcomes of vitrification.

Kandahar battle grows

NATO, Afghan forces kill dozens of Taliban soldiers

Helicopter gunships and troops blasted a valley in southern Afghanistan yesterday in a huge offensive by NATO and local forces against Taliban insurgents, many of whom broke out of jail last week.

The defence ministry in Kabul said dozens of Taliban including foreign militants, were killed in a NATO air strike and two Afghan army officers also died in the operation, in Arghandab district outside Kandahar city.

Meanwhile some 800 Afghan government troops, backed by hundreds of mainly Canadian NATO soldiers, are fighting 200 to 400 Taliban insurgents who seized seven villages in the Arghandab district, just northwest of Kandahar, the regional base for NATO troops. It is less than a week since the Taliban freed some 1,000 prisoners, including more than 300 of their comrades, from a jail in the city after a suicide truck bomber rammed the main gate.

"There are setbacks ... the prison breakout and the Arghandab operation, and there will be setbacks in the future," Canadian Major-General Marc Lessard, commander of NATO forces in southern Afghanistan, told Reuters in an interview.

Taliban spokesman Qari Mohammad Yousuf said militants had set their sights on Kandahar itself, the movement's birthplace, which lies about 20 kilometres from Arghandab.

Fresh off receiving a big shot in the arm on the weekend, the PGA took a shot to the you-know-what's yesterday when Tiger Woods revealed that he is done for the season.

Woods developed a double stress fracture in his left tibia two weeks prior to the U.S. Open. but decided to play through the pain. The good news is he won his 14th major; the bad news is he needs surgery on his ACL and time for those fractures to heal.

That sound you hear is millions of viewers changing the channel from the British Open to something else.

While golf fans will tune into the PGA's third major regardless, the British, the PGA Championship and the FedEx Cup will almost assuredly lose the casual sports fan as quickly as they just lost golf's biggest star.

The tour was perfectly positioned for a monstrous finish to the season based on Tiger's dramatic win three days ago, but with the biggest story of the year ending abruptly, the PGA is in need of divine intervention if it hopes to step back into the spotlight any time soon.

» Rumours persist that the Vancouver Canucks are among the teams interested in acquiring the services of Penguins' pending free agent Ryan Malone, who is perfectly positioned to cash in this summer.

Not only did the 27-year-old score a career-high 27 goals last season and pick up 16 points in 20 playoff game, he also displayed the type of toughness that every NHL team covets.

Malone took sticks, pucks and elbows to the face during the post-season, yet he still was found parked in front of opposing goalies despite the potential perils the position presents.

Though Malone may simply elect to take the biggest contract offered to him, Minnesota could have an advantage as Malone attended St. Cloud State, his wife hails from Minnesota, and he owns a summer home there to boot.

» Though some have questioned the Canucks' hiring of Ryan Walter based on his lack of coaching experience, I have no problem with the novel approach.

Since his days as a player, Walter has been involved in the game in a variety of capacities from broadcaster to consultant.

His player relations' skills are said to be excellent, and he was part of the staff that helped the Montreal Canadiens become the league's top offense and finish first in the East.

His path to NHL assistant coach might not be the traditional one, but the Canucks are in need of a new tradition as the old one features a whole lot of losing.

Golf superstar to have season ending surgery

Tiger Woods will have reconstructive surgery on his left knee that will sideline him for the rest of the 2008 season, the world No. 1 said yesterday.

The 32-year-old defied jabbing pain all week before clinching his 14th major title at the U.S. Open on Monday, winning a 19-hole playoff against compatriot Rocco Mediate.

It was his first tournament in two months since having been off for surgery to clean out some cartilage in his knee two days after he played the Masters in mid-April of this year.

Woods outlined that he would have reconstructive surgery on his anterior cruciate ligament, which he tore 11 months ago after last year's British Open at Carnoustie.

He also said he would require time off to rehabilitate a double stress fracture of his left tibia that was found last month and attributed to his intense rehabilitation and preparation for the U.S. Open at Torrey Pines in San Diego last weekend.

"I know much was made of my knee throughout the last week, and it was important to me that I disclose my condition publicly at an appropriate time," Woods said in a statement on his official website.

"I wanted to be very respectful of the USGA (United States Golf Association) and their incredibly hard work, and make sure the focus was on the U.S. Open.

"Now, it is clear that the right thing to do is to listen to my doctors, follow through with this surgery and focus my attention on rehabilitating my knee."

Russia grabs last quarter-final spot

EURO2008

Russia set up a Euro 2008 quarter-final with coach Guus Hiddink's native Netherlands after a deserved 2-0 win over Sweden in Group D yesterday completed the lineup for the last eight.

The Swedes only needed a draw to progress from the opening group stage which ended yesterday, but Roman Pavlyuchenko gave Russia a lead after a great passing play midway through the first half in Innsbruck before Andrei Arshavin, playing his first match of the tournament after a ban, finished off a similar flowing move later on.

Greece, who won Euro 2004 against all the odds and expectations, have returned to type as big-event whipping —the 16 finalists not to gain a single point after losing to Spain 2-1 yesterday.

Germany plays Portugal in the first quarter-final today without their coach Joachim Loew who has been suspended following his actions in the Austria game.

Team manager Oliver Bierhoff addressed UEFA's decision to ban Loew for one day from the touchline

UEFA said Loew would be allowed to follow today's match from the stands but would not have access to the dressing room, tunnel or technical area before or during the match and would not be able to contact his team by radio.

"I hope it will make us even more motivated," Bierhoff said. "But really the players will have motivation enough just with the opportunity to reach the semi-finals of a major tournament like this one."

Croatia faces Turkey tomorrow, Netherlands, Russia meet Saturday and Spain and Italy round out the quarter-finals on Sunday.

FIND OUT IF YOU HAVE CANDIDA OVERGROWTH!
YES
NO
Cravings for sweets - even after eating?
Feel bloated - is it showing?
Have you taken antibiotics?
Flatulences?
Headaches and mood swings?
Do you use birth control pills?
If you answer yes to 4 out of 6, you may likely have a Candida overgrowth in your intestines. Try dida for 4-6 weeks as a solution.

My stomach is flat again

Cathy Summers was devastated for several years because of her problems with yeast. She felt bloated, had gained weight, craved carbohydrates and her energy levels were lower than ever. It was also putting a real toll on her relationship with her boyfriend Peter.

I WAS DESPERATE

"Nobody seemed to take my condition seriously and no remedy would help me. But through at local health food store I got in contact with a naturopath and he was in no doubt, after hearing my symptoms; I had an imbalance in my intestines between healthy bacteria and yeast cells. He told me how common it is that yeast fungi overgrow in the intestines, but that most people don't know they have the problem. Actually, one in three of his female customers experienced these problems."

I TRIED DIDA

"The naturopath gave me a list of things to avoid, such as white sugar, white flour, candy, processed foods and active yeast (bread). He then put me on two dida tablets a day, for eight weeks and told me to take them with a meal."

NO MORE BLOATING!

"I cannot believe how much my situation has improved since using dida and following the naturopaths recommendations. My stomach is flat again! I am full of energy and my sweet cravings disappeared. It's such a relief to have found a natural solution that works. But best of all - my relationship with Peter is full of life and love again!"

YEAST LOVES SUGAR - BUT HATES CINNAMON!!

Candida fungi can overgrow if you eat a poor diet (refined sugars especially), if you have used antibiotics or birth control pills, or if your immune system is weak (malnutrition, overtraining, bad health in general).

Most people don't even know they suffer from Candida overgrowth, but women recognize it, when they get a yeast infection. The normal medical treatments are lotions or pills. These are effective but don't provide a long-term solution. Furthermore, over 40% of sufferers re-experience Candida problems after using these treatments.

Scientific research shows that especially high concentrations of cinnamon oil, garlic and oregano have a positive influence on the excessive growth of Candida Albicans. Dida™ is based on this research and has been used successfully in Scandinavia for many years.

Growing alternatives in rainforest

SCIENCE MATTERS
DAVID SUZUKI & DR. FAISAL MOOLA

We know that reducing carbon emissions is the primary way to slow climate change, but preserving forests is a key component as well. Forests are carbon sinks; that is, they absorb and store carbon.

When trees are cut down, that carbon is released into the atmosphere, thus speeding up global warming. In fact, scientists estimate about 20 per cent of greenhouse gas emissions come from deforestation.

Some economists, including former World Bank chief economist Sir Nicholas Stern, have concluded that preventing deforestation is the most cost-effective method of keeping carbon out of the atmosphere.

But how do we go about it? One idea is referred to as Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation, or REDD.

Two main strategies are being considered under REDD, both of which involve carbon credits and carbon trading. One would allow industrialized nations to meet Kyoto emissions-reduction targets by providing grants to developing countries if they reduce rates of deforestation. The other would allow countries that avoid deforestation to earn carbon credits that they could sell on the global carbon market.

Preserving forests is a key component in reducing carbon emissions. Scientists estimate about 20 per cent of greenhouse gas emissions come from deforestation.

The issue is complicated and the potential pitfalls are many. For example, the market-driven system of selling carbon credits may not benefit those people who live in the forests and make their living off the products of the intact ecosystem because it would only pay those who are currently logging to stop. We also have to face up to the fact that when providing grants to countries that reduce deforestation, it can be difficult to ensure the money benefits the people and not corrupt governments.

In some areas, indigenous people have already lost land and rights because governments have turned over forest "reserves" to companies charged with protecting them.

Let's hope the UN discussions lead to some viable solutions — solutions that preserve biodiversity and include all the inhabitants of the rainforest. It's unlikely that money will solve everything, but it may be a start to addressing the problems of poverty, economic change, and global warming.

Better air quality is silver lining in higher gas prices

ECO-MINDED
KAI CHAN WITH DOUW STEYN

Pain at the pump? We empathize. But sky-high gas prices often fuel understandable yet short-sighted policies. What about the long term? We're courting controversy to claim that pump pain has a big silver lining — reducing long-term air pollution.

Metro Vancouver's air quality is very good — most of the time. We now enjoy the benefits of past successes reducing pollution from various sources in the form of smoke, lead, and sulphur dioxide.

But Metro Vancouver's population is growing rapidly, which poses new challenges to air quality. Even now, air pollution contributes importantly to death and disease. And past successes were low-hanging fruit: Future successes won't come easily.

To keep our air clean, Metro Vancouver will need to tackle personal vehicle use. We all share responsibility here.

Biking: Bike-to-Work Week was great — keep it up. But also lobby for increased and improved bike routes, workplace showers, etc. Your biggest contributions will be through enabling others to ride safely.

vehicle facts

» In Metro Vancouver, vehicles are responsible for 46 per cent of ozone forming emissions.

» Growth rate of vehicles is greater than population growth rate because of urban sprawl.

Eco-density, transit expansion: They go hand-in-hand. Denser, more livable communities will reduce vehicle emissions, particularly so combined with public transit improvement. To help, you can live close to work and support these initiatives politically.

All these efforts will reward you with fewer trips to the pump. High gas prices give us incentive to do good — for air quality, and also for climate change. Hurrah for expensive gas!

Eureka moment results in mini-reno

URBAN DWELLER
carlyn.yandle@metronews.ca

It was in the middle of my sister's baby shower that I had a design epiphany. The 20 well-wishers would actually all have a place to sit if there was no wall between my living room and the adjacent second bedroom.

This is how I missed the gift-opening portion of the party. While my sister was opening onesies and hand-made blankets, I was caught up in a plan to close off the hallway door to the bedroom, move the closet to that space, install French doors that could swing inwards to create another seating arrangement for a crowd, maybe set up four swivel chairs around a low table in front of the wallbed. Funny how you can live in a place for a long time before the bleeding obvious re-design idea hits, usually when pressed by necessity (it being the mother of invention). That need for more space in the small space led to the clever invention seen in this week's photo, a master bedroom improved by a walk-through closet disguised by a new wall behind the headboard.

This minimal renovation can turn a problem master bedroom into an efficient, uncluttered space. All that's required is enough room length to accommodate the length of bed plus three feet of 'walkin' around space' and another four for the walk-through wardrobe behind the bed. It's often possible to gain that length required by removing the existing standard-issue double closet at the foot of the bed. If you're lucky enough to have the space, this is a smart way to ensure clothes never pile up in drifts around the room again, as the whole changing activity is more likely to happen in that separate space behind the bed.

The beauty of the walk-through wardrobe is in its capacity. Two people's clothing collections can fit nicely in two tiers of rods and, unlike the usual bi-fold closet, clothes don't disappear into dark corners. Instead, everything is in clear view, thanks to the open-ended design, which in turn allows for taking instant stock of what you have — and what needs to go.

This master bedroom benefits from a new feature wall that conceals a walk-through closet.

In this photo, the walk-through closet is flanked by his and hers dressers, each with own mirror and hanging pendant lamp, adding symmetry to the room and further enhancing the bed as focal point.

The standalone wall offers just enough space for two small end tables and two space-saving sconce lamps.

Genius.

Nothing beats a thick, healthy lawn on your bare feet

ARRESTING DESIGN
JEFFREY FISHER &
TAMMY SCHNURR
busted@arrestingdesign.com

Grass remains a perennial favourite with many folks, and why not? When it's well maintained, it looks green and lush, it filters pollution, it buffers hot temperatures, it absorbs water and it prevents soil erosion.

But poorly maintained grass can be an eyesore, looking patchy, worn, or dried out to a crisp. It certainly does not have a thick, healthy look.

In fact, poorly maintained grass adds an air of neglect, which is a design crime. Luckily, you can have a healthy lawn without using pesticides. As is often the case, preparation is paramount.

First of all, make sure you have a good spot for a lawn — it should be even ground with a gentle slope for drainage.

There should be no low spots since these will become waterlogged puddles after it rains.

Ideally, the soil should be deep (4 to 8 inches of topsoil), fertile, and loamy, meaning that it is a well-aerated mixture of sandy soil and organic matter. Soil with a lot of clay in it is a difficult medium for grass or any other plant (with the exception of weeds). It must be mixed with organic matter to loosen it up so that air and water can get through.

A lawn should enjoy a minimum of six hours of sunshine per day. Most grass will tolerate only moderate foot traffic — look to your local schoolyard to see the effect on grass of too many little feet.

If the conditions are not ideal, you can try changing your seeds.

For example, Kentucky bluegrass likes lots of sunlight, especially morning sun. Fine fescues are shade tolerant and ryegrass has a good tolerance to wear. But, if you have a serious problem area — too much shade, for example, you may have to plant other species, such as a bed of hostas, which do well in the shade.

When it's dry, mow high — 2.5 to 3 inches, and make sure your mower blades are sharp to avoid damaging grass. (If you've got a small lawn, consider a push mower.)

In summer, when growth is not so fast, you can leave clippings on the grass after mowing.

Clippings over .5 cm will smother your lawn, so you should rake it.

Watering should be done deeply and infrequently. Use a container on your lawn to measure how much water you've used—water at least 1 inch of water, and do it only when conditions are dry, not on a scheduled basis. Too much water can lead to poor growing conditions and disease. The best watering time is morning.

Any existing lawn will benefit from a thin layer of compost mixed with soil raked over it. In late summer, spreading grass seed (overseeding) with a top-dressing of compost will work wonders.

Aerating soil, or poking holes in the lawn to increase space for water and air is beneficial.

Coldplay disc more 'sexy'

Chris Martin jokes with media ahead of tour

Coldplay front man Chris Martin said this week the British band's new album was more "sexy" than the critically acclaimed X&Y that was released in 2005.

Joking with the press and appearing more relaxed than during sometimes tense exchanges with British journalists in recent days, Martin and his bandmates were in Barcelona to give a free concert ahead of a tour of North America, Japan and Europe.

Martin briefly walked out of a radio interview last week, accusing the host of "twisting" his words.

"I think we are definitely more handsome now than we were three years ago," Martin joked. "I think that's reflected in our music, it's much more sexy."

Viva La Vida or Death And All His Friends is the eagerly anticipated follow-up to X&Y and stormed to the top of the British album charts on Sunday. Its biggest commercial test, in the key U.S. market, comes this week.

Coldplay's new album is now available in stores.

X&Y sold an estimated 10 million copies worldwide, and if Viva La Vida can match that tally, Coldplay's record label EMI will breath a huge sigh of relief. The label, taken into private hands in 2007, lost Paul McCartney and Radiohead in 2007 and could see the Rolling Stones leave in 2008, according to industry experts.

Martin, married to actress Gwyneth Paltrow, said Coldplay had been surprised at how personal some of the new album was.

"When you finish a big tour two things go through your head: one is may be we need to do the same thing again and again because the most people will like that.

"But after about two weeks, you forget that you've ever been popular, and so all the music you write becomes very personal and it's only now when we are releasing it that we realize how personal it is."

Reviews of Viva La Vida have been generally positive, and a free pre-tour concert in London on Monday night was also warmly received.

The band worked with renowned producer Brian Eno on their fourth album, after Eno volunteered to collaborate with them, according to drummer Will Champion.

"We wanted to find someone who had the same effect on us as Brian Eno did on U2 and David Bowie, and Talking Heads, all these incredible bands that we love.

Badu's sonic backdrop

Singer follows up spring hit with summer album

By TINA CHADHA
Metro World News

"I guess you call it to the left," Erykah Badu says of her music, specifically New Amerykah: Pt. 1 (4th World War), her latest album.

It ventures beyond the soul-blues-jazz for which she was initially known into psycho-hip-hop-blaxploitation-dub. Call it a sonic backdrop that matches her lyrics that have always been challenging — think obscure references to the Five Percent Nation or Kemetic Orthodoxy, a traditional Egyptian religion.

Ever since 1997, when she leapt into the public eye with her Grammy-winning blues-soul debut Baduizm, Badu has been considered slightly kooky. There were the towering head wraps, oversized Ankhs, burning incense and concerts turned tea parties. Years later, when a journalist outed her for wearing artificial dreadlocks, she took to wearing enormous Afro and pageboy boy wigs, which she is now known to fling off mid-concert and arrange backwards on her head.

Yes, Badu, whose current stage show involves play with stability balls, tapping out eerie sounds on a Mac and stage diving, has always been, at least publicly, strange. But in an R&B landscape full of copycat vixens, her trippy persona and evolution from neo-soul hippie to funk priestess has made her a beloved icon.

Though her fans have followed her through her shift away from neo-soul into cosmic crooning, people who fell in love with her more frankincense-and-myrrh leanings will be pleased to know that her next album, tentatively called New Amerykah Pt. 2: Return of the Ankh promises old-school Badu.

"This is a very mental record," she says of Pt. 1, which sounds like what might happen if Bjork went hip hop and R&B. "The second one is very emotional. During 1997 through 1999, there was a certain feeling I had; I was studying Kemetics. That's the feeling I have when I listen to the second part. It's a return of that feeling and time, and it reminds me of Baduizm."

Borat followup in May

Bruno will be next Baron Cohen skit to hit theatres

Bruno, Sacha Baron Cohen's follow-up to Borat, has been scheduled by Universal Pictures for a May 15, 2009, release.

Like the title character in the hit Borat, Bruno is based on a skit character — this time an Austrian faux fashionista — from Cohen's former HBO series, Da Ali G Show.

So far, the Tom Hanks mystery-drama Angels & Demons, based on the Dan Brown novel, is the only competition for Bruno in its release slot.

Borat, which 20th Century Fox opened in November 2006, had a better-than-expected bow of $26.5 million and went on to gross $128.5 million domestically.

Lil Wayne tops 1M sales in first week

With Tha Carter III, Lil Wayne becomes the first artist since 50 Cent in 2005 to sell more than 1 million copies of an album in a single week, according to chart reports issued yesterday by Nielsen SoundScan.

In its first week on the market, Tha Carter III sold just over 1 million units. The last album to top that milestone was 50 Cent's The Massacre in March 2005.

Billboard
» Lil Wayne first appeared on the Billboard 200 in 1999.

No album in 2006 sold as many as 800,000 copies in a single frame, and the largest sales week since The Massacre belonged to Kanye West's Graduation, which netted an opener of 957,000 copies it hit stores on Sept. 11, 2007.

summer dresses

Celebrate summer with dresses that are perfect for the season. Look out for ones with fuller skirts, like the Dagg & Stacey dress. The empire silhouette is a flattering cut especially if the neckline is as beautiful as the Joe Fresh dress. For an everyday dress, consider Gentle Fawn (gentlefawn.com). The one pictured is an example of a classic summer dress, it's cinched at the waist and cut with an a-line skirt that hits right below the knee.

Slipknot titles album, prepares for tour

Slipknot's fourth album has been christened All Hope Is Gone and will arrive Aug. 26.

A first single and track list for the Roadrunner release have yet to be announced.

"We have made an album that will show the road behind, the road ahead, and where we are as men," group member Corey Taylor said in a statement. "I think it's the best thing I've ever made. And I challenge anyone to prove me wrong."

> « We have made an album that will show the road behind, the road ahead, and where we are as men. »
> Slipknot member Corey Taylor

Taylor previously described the new album to Billboard as a "very dark" cross between "Vol. 3" and 2001's "Iowa." "It has so much power in it and yet there are so many great spots for melody," he said. "It's a controlled chaos that hits you right out of the gate."

Slipknot will co-headline this summer's 30-date Rockstar Energy Drink Mayhem tour, which begins July 9 at the White River Amphitheatre in Auburn, Washington.

Video games industry set to shoot up in sales

Global total to hit $68.3 billion by 2012, data shows

The video game industry is expected to shoot from $41.9 billion in global sales last year to $68.3 billion in 2012, a compound annual growth rate of 10.3 per cent and better than all other media sectors except for online advertising and access.

The data comes courtesy of the upcoming Global Entertainment and Media Outlook: 2008-2012 from PricewaterhouseCoopers.

Console games, the largest category, will grow by 6.9 per cent annually, from $24.9 billion last year to $34.7 billion in 2012.

Online and wireless games will grow the fastest at 16.9 per cent and 19 per cent, respectively. Online will jump from $6.6 billion last year to $14.4 billion in 2012, while wireless games go from $5.6 billion to $13.5 billion in the same frame.

Just behind those is the emerging video game advertising sector, which will go from the $1 billion level in 2007 to $2.3 billion in 2012, a 16.7 per cent annual growth rate.

"That's phenomenal growth," said PwC partner Stefanie Kane — especially considering in-game advertising only works with certain kinds of games, sports being a primary example.

The U.S. also will lag a bit compared with global growth, with overall video game revenue growing by 7.9 percent annually, from $12.1 billion in 2007 to $17.7 billion in 2012.

As of the end of 2007 in the U.S., there was an installed base of nine million Xbox 360 consoles. That was followed in the next-generation category by seven million for Nintendo's Wii and three million for PlayStation 3, both of which were introduced in November 2006.

factors

PwC cites several key factors in growing the video game industry, including:

» mobile phones capable of downloading games with sophisticated graphics and displaying them on relatively large screens;

» an online market driven by the increased penetration of broadband households;

» the increasing popularity of massively multiplayer online games that earn revenue through subscription fees and microtransactions.

McKenzies going south?

INTELLEVISION
RICK McGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

GET LOST, EH? I suppose as a Canadian I should be used to this feeling, but there's something both triumphant and sad in the news that Bob and Doug McKenzie are heading to the small screen in cartoon form, with Fox their likely home in the U.S., according to a Canadian Press story.

Talking to CP from Los Angeles, where he was working on scripts for the show, Dave Thomas said that the show was initially green-lit by Global here in Canada, and that Fox expressed interest when they saw how eager the Canadian network was to get the show in production, and asked to see scripts and the pilot.

"We submit the pilot in early August," Thomas said, "and we'll hear after that. But I think they'll go for it — I think they like this show. Just to get them this close is good, and means we can probably get someone else interested if they're not."

According to Thomas, the show takes the iconic character created for SCTV with Rick Moranis and puts them in a new, apparently updated setting. "They are in a world that they weren't in before, and they have some friends who are a little raunchier than they are," he said.

Rick Moranis, left, and Dave Thomas as SCTV's Bob and Doug McKenzie. The Fox network is eyeing a show featuring the fictional brothers in cartoon form.

While Thomas is clearly the instigator of the cartoon iteration of the McKenzies, Moranis is far less enthusiastic, as he "doesn't enjoy doing any showbiz stuff anymore ... I can't even guarantee his involvement long term in this, but whatever ... if I have to drag a sound-alike in for his voice, I'll do that. I don't think anyone would care because it's a new product."

I'm not sure I'd agree with that last bit, Dave, but we'll see, won't we? Thomas is abundantly aware of the irony that a skit created as a joke to placate the grumblings of Canada's culture bureaucrats concerned about Canadian content on the show has turned into a nest egg of sorts, and an ongoing role for the comedians.

"I thought it was a bit of a nightmare back then, when I thought of myself as a young artist, but now that I think of myself as an old hack, I'm glad I have Bob and Doug," Thomas said.

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

Johnny keeps his promises

New hat for 12-year-old: Johnny Depp is a cat in the hat one 12-year-old will never forget, People.com reports. Playing 1930's bank robber John Dillinger — American's Most Wanted at the time — for his upcoming movie Public Enemies, Depp was shooting on location in Wisconsin in April when he was observed on the set by local boy Jack Taylor, who especially admired Depp/Dillinger's hat. In fact, the boy wanted the fedora, and asked the actor if he could have it. Depp, 45, said Taylor could, once the movie was finished. Last week, reports the Oshkosh, Wis., newspaper the Northwestern, Depp made good on his promise. Taylor received the hat. The leading man's rep also included gifts for Taylor's four siblings from Depp's Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, as well as a note from the star himself, telling Jack to enjoy what was sent. Now Taylor is at work on a thank-you note. His parents are helping. METRO NEWS SERVICES
